

Some firms violate wage laws, Y study shows

By RICHARD WILKINS
Universe Staff Writer

A large number of area businesses may be violating federal and state minimum wage and hour standards, if a survey being completed by the BYU Ombudsman's Office is accurate.

Most of the violations involve paying less than the minimum wage and not paying for overtime, according to Steve Madsen, Ombudsman.

The survey of 300 businesses in the Provo-Orem area was conducted by 15 students working for the BYU Ombudsman's office.

During the survey, workers talked with management representatives and at least one employee at each business.

Businesses were questioned about starting wages of full- and part-time employees, amount of tips and commissions, extent and nature of the business, number of employees per week, and whether the business had a student certificate.

A student certificate allows businesses to pay students below minimum wage for a percentage of their payroll. However, the survey showed a large number of businesses are still in violation of state and federal wage and hour standards, Madsen said.

"We will make no determination of who is in violation," Madsen said, "but informally, it appears 33 per cent are in violation of federal guidelines."

The survey, which will be completed in written form today, deals mainly with wage and hour practices of local businesses, said Jerry Poirier, co-chairman of the wage-and-hour study.

Madsen said that after he receives the written report today he will make a determination of "what to do with the information."

The investigation was conducted, he said, to provide information for students, not to point an accusing finger at local businesses.

"The U.S. Department of Labor Wage and Hour Division has requested the findings of the survey, but we have not decided if we will turn the information over to them," said Madsen.

However, a student forum will be held to present the information to the student body, he said. The date for the forum has not yet been determined.

The study found many businesses paying under minimum wage requirements, but it is not the underpayment, it's the coercion involved with the underpayment that is devastating, said Poirier.

"Some people work for $1.65 an hour and don't dare complain because they know they'll be out. There are many more employees than jobs, and workers are afraid to speak out for fear of being out a job," he said.

Madsen added that this situation creates instances where workers perform services they are not paid for. "Some work overtime with no pay to keep their job," he said. "They know if they don't do it, the management will hire someone else who will."

"If a business does not come under federal jurisdiction, the worker may have little legal recourse," said Poirier. The Utah State law, he said, has "no teeth."

"Employers may be in violation of state wage-and-hour laws, but the state can't require the employer to pay. It can only request employers to measure up," he said.

But the federal government does have more power.

"The federal government can force businesses that come under its jurisdiction to comply," he said.

Businesses under federal jurisdiction, according to Poirier, are businesses with over $250,000 gross volume yearly, interstate chains with over $1 million gross yearly or businesses dealing in interstate commerce.

Scott Madsen, a co-chairman of the study, said bigger businesses are generally not in violation.

"It is the smaller businesses which are doing a big enough volume to come under regulations, that have more violations," he said.

"A lot of the violations," he added, "are caused because employers are ignorant of the law."

Many valley polluters darken 'mountain air'

By RICHARD WILKINS

Joe and Karen moved to American Fork Canyon, they said, the air they would breathe was "proverbial mountain air," clean and fresh.

"Had we known the air pollution in the valley, we would have never come here," said Murdock. "We have lived in Timb, but many days it is not breathable because of the smog."

Murdock and his wife are but two of the thousands of people who live in the Provo-Orem area.

Eating plant within limits, EPA eyes future action

Central heating plant fully in compliance with the EPA's Air Quality Criteria, but it could run into trouble in the near future, according to the report of the EPA's Air Quality Criteria Division, Region 9, following an inspection of emissions from the Physical Plant 3, however, are in compliance and in so in the future.

Mrs. J. Keith McVie, a citizen member of the county's Air Pollution Commission, is another of them. "People need to be made aware of the potentially hazardous effects of bad air," she said. "I am acquainted with an eye, nose and throat specialist who claims his business goes up 40 per cent during temperature inversions."

Priority One

The whole Wasatch Front is termed a "priority one" region, according to Cecil Carroll of the EPA's Salt Lake City office. This means the Wasatch Front cities, housing nearly 90 per cent of Utah's population, are not meeting the air standards set by the federal regulatory agency, he explained.

Dr. L. Douglas Smoot, associate professor of chemical engineering at BYU, concluded after an extensive study in 1970, that Wasatch Front air pollution was "as potentially serious as any in the United States."

The types of pollutants plaguing the Wasatch Front vary from city to city. In Utah County, the most serious problem is particulate pollution fine particles of dust and matter suspended in the atmosphere. Utah County has the highest level of particulate emissions in the state. Provo has the highest level in the county.

EPA standard for particulate pollution is 75 micrograms of particulate matter per cubic meter of air. Provo regularly averages between 85 and 95 micrograms per cubic meter. On given days, especially during winter the level has shot to over 500 micrograms per cubic meter.

A vigorous debate exists over whether Geneva Valley is the primary cause of such high pollution levels in the County (see Part I of this series in this week's Monday Magazine). But regardless of Geneva's contribution, there are other sources in the county definitely contributing to the particulate pollution.

"We have had a contractor doing an emission inventory on the Wasatch Front region which indicates that fugitive emissions account for perhaps a third of the particulate problem in Utah County," said Marius Gedgaudas, a technical adviser to the Denver EPA office. Fugitive emissions are from natural dust in the atmosphere. Because of the difficulty of controlling such sources, Gedgaudas believes controls on industrial and municipal sources are the only way to lower the county's pollutant level.

Other polluters

Besides Geneva Steel, the major contributors are Provo City Power, the BYU Heating Plant, and the Utah State Power Plant.

BYU address

The legal profession in America must improve its courtroom skills and ethics, according to F. Lee Bailey.

Bailey, currently chief defense attorney for Patricia Hearst and well-known for his defense of Dr. Sam Sheppard and the "Boston Strangler," addressed an overflow crowd of students Monday in the ELWC Ballroom.

Comparing the British and American legal systems, Bailey said the "pinnacle of the legal system is the advocate." But where the British legal schooling and courtroom system produces "competent lawyers," he said, the U.S. system often does not.

In the British system, Bailey said, lawyers in apprenticeship learn to examine witnesses, sum up cases, address the jury and "use the King's English."

Bailey said another problem facing the legal profession is its ethics.

"The problem with Watergate," he said, "was that people were naive. They felt they could control the lawyers who would prosecute them."

John Dean said lawyers decided to commit a crime, Bailey explained.

A weekend snowstorm precluded or slowed many BYU students' return to Provo after the Thanksgiving vacation, but no accidents or deaths were reported.

Linda Parks, a junior from Lewiston, Id., said a blinding snow storm between Lewiston and Boise slowed travel to 10 m.p.h. She said freezing rain and blowing snow drastically reduced visibility. The trip from Lewiston to Boise normally an eight-hour drive, took 14 hours.

Several students said roommates had called from Idaho saying they would not be in Provo for the beginning of classes because roads were impassable.

The University of Idaho at Moscow was closed Monday in hopes that students would not try to travel roads snow-covered highways throughout the state. Blowing snow caused some road closures.

A student who returned from Idaho Falls Sunday said the roads were in good condition although many cars were stranded in ditches along the route.

covered by drifts.

The number of traffic accidents declined as warmer temperatures melted the undercoating of ice on many roads Sunday and Monday.

According to the National Weather Service, weather in Southern Idaho and Utah should continue to be good for travel.

Light showers are expected in the evenings. A few hundredths of an inch of rain in the valleys and snow in the mountains is expected.

The Weather Bureau said temperatures in the mid 20s at nights could form patches of black ice on the highways.

The nation's Thanksgiving holiday weekend traffic death toll reached 379, far below the National Safety Council's predictions.

Elder McConkie to talk in devotional

Elder Bruce R. McConkie, a member of the Council of the Twelve, will speak at the devotional assembly at 10 a.m. today in the Marriott Center.

Elder McConkie was called to be a member of the Council of the Twelve in 1972 after serving 26 years as a member of the First Council of the Seventy. From 1961 to 1964, he was president of the Southern Australian Mission.

He has been a member of the Utah State Bar, a practicing attorney, assistant Salt Lake City attorney, a city prosecutor, and a security and intelligence officer in the U.S. Army.

Elder McConkie has authored and published an encyclopedic work on "Mormon Doctrine," covering more than 1,000 subjects. He has edited three volumes of "Doctrines of Salvation" and is the author of "Doctrinal New Testament Commentary."

Bailey: Lawyer, heal thyself

Successes are limited," said Bailey. "Incorruptibility of the system could discourage even naive fools with law degrees from trying to create a conspiracy."

The public has also lost faith in the Justice Department, which, he said, should be "stripped of its name until it deserves it."

As further evidence of weakness in the legal system, Bailey pointed out that during Watergate the system lacked machinery to prosecute the executive branch of government. "We resorted to a special prosecutor," he said.

Essentially Watergate was not a difficult case to prosecute. "Few felons sit around and record their doings," Bailey said.

"People in America are brought up to believe that goodness is a defense, and it is not," he said. "A 'good person,' said Bailey, need only find himself in the right place at the wrong time to end up in court."

What America and the legal profession need, he said, is a moral fiber. Quoting a speech from his law school graduation, Bailey said lawyers can work hard, make money and perhaps get involved in "all manner of evil and nasty doings." The ethical challenge for lawyers, he said, "is to end up at 50 with more money."

Israelis to U.N. : PLO no!

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Israel agreed Monday to keep the United Nations buffer force on the Golan Heights. But the government angrily denounced the U.N. Security Council for "surrender to Syrian extortion" and declared it will take no part in the council's Mideast debate next month because the Palestine Liberation Organization will be invited.

In an eleventh hour compromise Monday, the council agreed to Syria's demand that the PLO be included in the debate next Jan. 12 and Syria accepted a six-month extension of the U.N. Golan force.

A Palestinian spokesman at the United Nations said the council had thus recognized the PLO "as the sole representative of the people of Palestine," as the General Assembly did last year. Israeli officials privately voiced concern that the United States had failed to veto the resolution or at least abstain from the vote. They said the government found only "partly satisfactory" an undisclosed explanation cabled to Jerusalem by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

In Jerusalem, police seized 20 students who broke into U.N. headquarters in an attempt to deliver a petition to Maj. Gen. Ensis Silasau, commander of U.N. Mideast forces. The students were later released and the state radio quoted them as saying they were beaten by U.N. forces.

The U.N. General Assembly meanwhile began a week's debate on the Middle East.

House to mull Ford N.Y. bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, back from its Thanksgiving recess, shifted its legislative gears Monday to give a quick start to President Ford's $2.3 billion loan plan for short-term aid to New York City.

House leaders agreed, in effect, to scrap the bill the House was to take up today and substitute, without a break in schedule, the Ford proposal.

Possible trouble loomed in the Senate, however. Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., who has opposed efforts he said would "reward bad management," said in a weekend speech in Mobile, Ala., he will attempt to filibuster the measure.

Chinese warn Ford of Soviet detente

PEKING — President Ford begins talks today with Chinese leaders who, at the start of his visit, warned him about what they see as the dangers of detente with the Soviet Union. The warning note was sounded by Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-ping in a toast at a lavish banquet at which Ford was honored just four hours after his arrival.

Teng, without mentioning the Soviet Union directly, referred to it as "the country which most zealously preaches peace but is the most dangerous source of war."

Russ clergyman to get church post

BAIROBI, Kenya — A Russian Orthodox churchman is among nominees to the six-member presidium of the World Council of Churches, the first to be proposed from a Communist-bloc nation, it was learned Monday.

Two women, one a North American and the other an African, also were reported on a nominating committee's slate to be presidents of the interdenominational body.

N.Y. mayor denies state control

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — New York Mayor Abraham Beame denied on Monday that new state controls over budget decisions in his financially shaky city had taken operation of the city out of his hands.

"The mayor of New York is still the manager of the city," he told newsmen at the annual meeting of the National League of Cities here. "He still runs the city, and determines priorities, he hires and fires, and develops programs."

In return for state aid to help avert a New York City default, a board composed of state officials, city officials including Beame, and private businessmen, has been given authority over spending levels and borrowing policy in the city.

Students out early for Christmas

PITTSBURGH — A strike Monday by the city's 3,700 public school teachers is giving 62,000 pupils a head start on the Christmas holiday vacation.

But teachers say they are planning tutoring centers for some pupils if the walkout continues into the new year, and some community organizations are making plans for classes outside schools.

The teachers struck at midnight, overwhelmingly rejecting a last-ditch proposal by the school board of a $1,000 across-the-board salary increase in 1976.

Canadian postmen may end strike

OTTAWA, Canada — Striking postal workers were expected to vote Monday night to end their 42-day-old strike despite their leaders' recommendation that they reject a tentative contract agreement.

The agreement was reached Saturday, and the 22,000 members of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers were meeting tonight to vote on the proposals.

Arnold Gould, the union's national director for the Ontario region, said the national executive recommended that the strikers reject the proposed contract. But an estimated 2,700 union members have already gone back to work.

Plant, Utah Valley Hospital, the State Hospital and Pacific States Cast Iron Pipe Company, according to estimates derived by Curtis Morgan in a masters thesis study for the BYU Chemical Engineering Department. Pollution also comes from Utah Power and Light plants at the mouth of Provo Canyon and in American Fork Canyon. But apparently this contribution is considerably less than sources in the heart of municipal areas.

"We feel it is our responsibility to control pollution," says David Mead, a spokesman for Utah Power and Light. "That's why we've had precipitators installed since 1950. Dean Allred, superintendent of the Hale plant in Provo Canyon, claims the precipitators remove 98 per cent of fly ash from the burning coal.

What is the contribution of the in-city sources? The master's thesis study done by Morgan in 1971 estimated respective contributions: Provo City Power, 40 tons of emissions per year; the BYU Heating Plant, about 75 tons per year; the Pacific States Cast Iron Pipe Company, 44 tons per year.

Provo's central city power plant was put on standby earlier this year and is currently not contributing to the local pollution problem. Provo does not intend to fire up the plant again before 1977 and may not even then, says Ronald L. Dean, superintendent of power.

Miss Christine Phillips, an attorney for the Air Quality Division of the Region VIII EPA office in Denver, said official listings of Provo's other pollution sources are much higher than in the Morgan report. Pacific States Cast Iron Co., for example, is listed as having a particulate emission output of "over 100 tons per year," but Miss Phillips says the company is considered to be "in compliance" with all existing regulations.

Y heating plant

The situation with the BYU Heating Plant is somewhat different, Jack Meredith, chief operating engineer of the plant, claims he is currently within all state and EPA limits. But Miss Phillips notes that while the plant is not technically in violation, its current legal status is still open to question. A recent study done for the EPA by Pacific Environmental Services of Santa Monica, Calif., indicates the five coal-fired boilers of the BYU Heating Plant are capable of putting out emissions in violation of legal limits. The plant will not be listed as officially in violation, however, until the EPA has double-checked the calculations of the California firm and taken an inspection tour of the BYU facility. (For more details on the status of the BYU Heating Plant, see related story on this page.)

Though particulate pollution is the most potentially hazardous form in the county, automobile-related pollutants (such as carbon monoxide, hydrocarbons and nitric oxide) could become a serious problem as the population increases. In terms of tons of pollutants being put into the air, automobiles are by far the worst offenders. An emissions inventory published by the State Division of Health in April 1974, estimated vehicle-related pollutants accounted for 92,400 tons out of a total of 128,730 tons of all types of air pollution in Utah. By contrast, the total particulate pollution for Utah County amounts to only 11,910 tons per year.

ally known research study emissions at it. After six months of the smokestack was to be within EPA limits, said William C. supervising engineer utilities section for Physical Plant. These were reported both to A and to state agencies ang air quality. y feels there may be a rstanding on the part A office personnel will be resolved when ent engineers resume ations at BYU.

rding to Stacey, work PA engineers two years wed the heating plant I compliance with ards, even up to im foreseeable loads.

old J. Anderson, nt director of the Plant, also feels there e a misunderstanding ing the five boilers at said BYU would be ction if all five boilers ed up at once.

"But we only fire up two at a time," Anderson said. "The others are on standby. We don't use all five at once. We never have, and we never will. As a matter of fact, I don't think we have the distribution capacity to use all five at the same time."

Asked about occasional puffs of black smoke which sometimes emerge from the BYU stack, Anderson said this occurs only when boilers are being fired up or switched. Such black smoke, he added, lasts only about 10 or 20 minutes, during which time engineers are busy making adjustments.

Should BYU be forced to install emission controls, the cost could exceed $2-3 million dollars, Stacey said.

"We hope we won't have to do this," the engineer added. If the situation merits further action, BYU is willing to do whatever is necessary to comply with the law, but we don't want to spend the money needlessly."

Winter smoggiest time is coming and with it the worst months of the year a Valley air pollution.

iding to Dr. Robert Bergener of BYU's Health Science ment, temperature inversions are responsible for the pells of air pollution in the valley. Most temperature ns occur during the winter months.

ersion occurs, explained Bergener, when a layer of old air descends over the valley surface air, normally the night and early morning hours. The dense, cold air e vertical lift of the warmer surface air molecules. ollutants are contained in the surface air, they are and visible smog or haze results.

ollutants usually escape when canyon winds carry e cold air, allowing the surface air to rise. "A high front in the area prevents this," explained Bergener, it is not accompanied by wind."

'Then turn right at the...'

This sign, housed in its temporary setting, might aid some in giving directions while thorough confusing others. The sign was uprooted by construction of the drainage system, but a little Yankee ingenuity brought it in its place. The construction is not yet complete and work is scheduled to continue.

Submit names of top teachers

Nominations for the annual Karl G. Maeser Distinguished Teaching Award will be accepted through Dec. 19.

Any BYU student, faculty member or alumnus may nominate recipients for the award according to Dale R. McCann, coordinator of special gifts for the Alumni Association.

Nominations are also being accepted for four Karl G. Maeser Awards for Teaching Excellence and three Karl G. Maeser Research and Creative Arts Awards which are to be presented to members of the BYU faculty, McCann said.

The awards are given by the BYU Alumni Association and BYU.

The Karl G. Maeser Distinguished Teaching Award recipient will receive a $1,000 check with the award. The four recipients of the Awards for Teaching Excellence will each receive $500. The three faculty members to receive the Research and Creative Arts Awards will be presented with $3,000 each, McCann said.

Nomination forms may be picked up at the Alumni House, the information desk in the Wilkinson Center, or at any dean's office.

Only a few nominations have been submitted, said McCann.

A nomination for any of these awards must include a statement of the accomplishments of the nominee and reasons why he should be considered for the award.

The selection committee will consist of three students, including the student body president, three faculty members chosen at large, three alumni of the university and the executive secretary of the Alumni Association.

The Karl G. Maeser Distinguished Teaching Award is given in recognition of a distinguished and devoted career of meritorious service in teaching at BYU.

The awards for teaching excellence are given in recognition of outstanding teaching abilities and performance.

The awards for research and creative arts are given in recognition of competence and performance in these areas.

Y student questions infraction

(Editors note: The Office of the Ombudsman is an organization responsible for hearing students' complaints and grievances on legal, university and consumer-oriented problems).

Issue: I had a car that needed to be towed from southern California to Provo, so I had my sister tow me behind her car while I steered my car. Coming through St. George, a highway patrolman pulled my sister over for speeding and gave her a citation. He then came back to my car and also issued me a citation. I do not feel that I should have to pay as I was only steering my car. What can I do?

Answer: We contacted our attorney and he believes that under the law you would be held responsible for the control of the vehicle you were steering. We therefore advise you to honor your citation.

Issue: Now that I am of legal age, how do I go about changing my bank account from joint custodianship to just my name?

Answer: After informing your parents of your intentions, go to the bank and close the joint custodianship and then open a new account in your name only.

If you have a problem, or would like to raise an issue about any university, legal or consumer question, contact the office of the Ombudsman, ext. 4132 or drop by the office in 115 ELWC.

Hawaiian quake: century's biggest

HILO, HAWAII (AP) — The strongest earthquake to hit Hawaii in over 100 years triggered a tidal wave and a brief volcanic eruption that spewed molten lava 30 feet in the air.

The quake, which struck Saturday morning, registered 7.2 on the Richter scale.

Kelshaw cautions women in lectures

Warris, a junior from Eagle Mountain, Calif., majoring in psychology, throws the instructor of her class in defense.

What should a coed do to avoid being a crime victim? What should she do when they do occur?

These and other questions are being answered by BYU coeds in on-campus housing in a series of lectures presented by BYU Security Chief Robert Kelshaw.

According to Kelshaw, 109 crimes of indecent exposure and 39 obscene phone calls were reported to BYU Security last year. If women took certain precautions, he said these crimes could be decreased.

To protect themselves against crimes of indecent exposure, Kelshaw cautioned women never to walk alone at night, especially through parks or other secluded areas. He advised coeds exposed to such crime to memorize the face of the offender in order to give a good description to Security.

In cases of indecent phone calls, he said the phone company, in cooperation with the police, can put a tracer on the victim's phone which will be able to provide the address of the caller. He warned coeds never to give their name or other information over the phone to unknown callers.

One of the most dangerous of these types of law breakers, according to Kelshaw, is the window peeper. He said window peepers, when not apprehended, often return to the same place several days later. To guard against window peepers, he told coeds to double check to be sure their drapes are completely closed. If a window peeper is discovered, coeds should notify Security immediately.

If a coed is attacked after taking the proper precautions, he said her best friend is a clear head. She has two choices: she can either calm the attacker down or resist.

To calm the attacker down, Kelshaw said the key element is time. The longer the coed can talk to the attacker, the better her chances are of getting out of the situation. If this doesn't work, he said, then there is plenty of time to fight.

When fighting the attacker, a coed should use anything she can to her advantage, he said. She should figure out what parts of her body are free and use them. If the hands and feet are immobile, the head can do some real damage if butted into a nose or another area that is tender, he said.

Kelshaw warned women to use extreme caution when an attacker has a weapon. He also said it is unwise for a woman to carry a weapon because it could be used against her.

Other precautions which Kelshaw said women can take to prevent crimes include:

- Lock all doors, including apartment, room or car doors, both day and night.
- Also change locks after moving into a new apartment.
- Never go to the laundry alone, especially at night.

- Always take a roommate when walking alone at night and avoid unlighted streets.

- Expect the unexpected to happen.

If a coed is followed, she should flee from the area into the safest area possible.

Project Mexico: be re-evaluated

By DONNA ROUVIERE
Universe Staff Writer

Project Mexico, a BYU service program in Mexico, will not this year.

Project, a two-month Travel Studies program held during spring term, is being postponed until April 1977 to allow time to evaluate it and determine ways to make it more effective, according to Stanley A. Peterson, Dean of Continuing Education.

Project Mexico is a service project in which students teach of the LDS church in Mexico in literacy, health and genealogy, agriculture, construction and English as a language. It was started four years ago.

At its beginning, Project Mexico has been working in the state of Puebla, Mexico, south of Mexico City. However, the project was not needed in Puebla anymore, plans were made to take it to another area in 1976.

It is not time to assess the needs of members of the church in a new area before April, Dean Peterson said.

One of the new Church programs in the service areas that Project Mexico works in, time is also needed to determine if Project Mexico should fit into the church's overall plan of welfare in developing countries.

It is important to be sure Project Mexico is complementing and not competing with the programs of the church," said Peterson.

The evaluation of Project Mexico will include an in-depth study to determine what effect the program has had on the lives of the people of Mexico. "Whatever we do we need to do it well," he said. "We need time to look at the program and come up with a long-term plan."

The program involves an average of 100 students and members every year. Last year, students contacted 1,000 people, taught 44 people how to read and trained 160 people to be leaders in the wards and branches in different service areas.

For Santa sought to brighten Christmas

NE THROSSELL
Universe Staff Writer

Christmas will be a busy time for hundreds of children this year. The Division of Family Services, through the ASBYU Office of Community Services, is working together with the Division of Family Services to match needy families with BYU groups who contribute to a happy Christmas.

Hebb, director of the Division of the Sub for Family Services, said that gifts to families can be given in many forms. Needy groups may need food, clothing, toys, or a Christmas tree for their assigned families.

These may indicate the type of help needed. The Division of Family Services then provides them with an appropriate family, according to Lankford, Sub for Family Services.

Requests for Santa must be submitted by Dec. 15. The office of Student Services provides suggestions for gifts, but leaves the selection and carrying out of the project to the Christmas plans of the sponsors. The sponsors are to submit a report of the project after they are completed. The report is to include the number of people helped in the project, the approximate monetary value of the goods and services provided, and a description of the project. Last year, 100 Utah County

Economic boom not predicted

NEW YORK (AP) — The Economic Forum, a group of 11 of the country's top economists, predicted Sunday that business recovery would continue through 1976, but said no boom is in prospect. The forum projected a gross national product of $1,651,500,000,000, which would be $180 billion, or 12 per cent, more than in 1975.

However, members said only 5.8 per cent would represent true growth and the rest inflation.

Chairman Albert T. Somers said the process would be "a careful, deliberate recovery. It follows a recession which deeply wounded many important industries and left a residue of caution and distress that will not be quickly dissipated as recovery proceeds."

The forum, which meets twice a year under sponsorship of the Conference Board, an independent research organization, also predicted that consumer and wholesale prices would rise by 6.6 per cent in 1976, down from the 9 per cent rate this year.

Big business: term papers sold to university students

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — His professors at the University of South Carolina would be proud of 28-year-old John Magee—maybe.

Magee studied marketing at South Carolina. Then he took a job selling insurance. "I sold a lot," he says. "They were going to put me into management. But the whole thing got me depressed."

Magee quit insurance. Via a newspaper ad he stumbled onto an idea. It might, he thought, be a money-maker: sell term papers to college students.

A popular rock song fills Magee's paneled suite of offices as the youthful entrepreneur—in jeans and casual shirt—intones, "Wherever there's a demand for something, you'll be able to sell your product. . . . There's always been a demand for term papers."

There always will be."

Magee's firm, Collegiate Research Systems, is four years old. Its founder laughs when he admits: "Yeah, I guess if things keep going the way they have I'll make a million dollars at it."

He first tried the term paper business in New Orleans. He was run out of town. "The D.A., the newspapers, everyone was down on us."

He heard then that Pennsylvania had just written a law against selling term papers. Ideal. He set up shop in Camden, N.J., just across the Delaware River from Philadelphia.

"We put advertisements up at Penn. They sent us a letter saying the district attorney was going to investigate us if we ever came back," he said. "But things now are different. That was two years ago. Now they don't care what we put up — as long as we don't put staples into live trees."

Before Magee sells a term paper, the customer has to sign a purchase agreement on which there is a disclaimer, "with this purchase I have no intent to defraud any school."

"We sort of expect them to rewrite the paper. I'd be afraid to use it just as I got it," says Magee.

Magee, who recently opened two new offices in Rutherford, N.J. and Los Angeles, claims his company isn't "trying to fool anyone. . . . What's the difference if we do it or the kid's roommate does it? How about fraternities that have them on file? Or the professor who writes a book and makes it mandatory reading for his class?"

Magee's catalogue lists thousands of term papers. Whatever the subject, if he doesn't have it he'll get it.

For instance No. 7038-A, "Nigeria's Agriculture Economy," is five pages long, written from three sources and costs the buyer $27.50—with a $3 charge if you want same-day service.

It cost Magee $7.50 to have the paper written. Free-lance writers, jobless college pros, schoolteachers, housewives. These make up his stable of writers. He pays them a penny a word.

The writer pens the paper and sells it once. Magee can sell it 100 times.

"It's just good business," he says.

Thefts plague campus

ONE MARTINEZ
Staff Writer

According to Security Chief Robert Kelshaw, wallets and purses containing up to $160 have been stolen this semester. Last week, two wallets, containing $33 and $40 were taken from the men's issue rooms in the Richards Building and Smith Field House.

Kelshaw said he is concerned that only personal belongings worth a great deal or containing a large amount of money are being reported. Security estimates that only one-third of such thefts are reported.

In addition to purse and wallet thefts, other valuables and personal possessions reported missing in 1974-75 totaled 658 incidents. Kelshaw said in September of this year 68 thefts were reported on campus, and 162 in October.

Kelshaw said he thinks many of the offenders are not affiliated with the university. Last year 52 per cent of all thefts investigated were committed by persons not connected with BYU.

Last week a non-student pleaded guilty to three counts of petty larceny that occurred on campus. According to Kelshaw, the investigating officers estimated the 18-year-old Provo girl had taken approximately $2,000 worth of items. Most of the items were from purses and wallets she confessed to taking from the campus dorm and locker rooms, explained Kelshaw.

A few years ago a group of local juveniles were responsible for many of the thefts on campus. Kelshaw said four or five juveniles were coming to the campus and stealing purses and wallets, but he doesn't think an organized group is responsible for the thefts this year.

According to Kelshaw, thefts are occurring primarily in the Smith Field House and the Richards P.E. building in the locker rooms, although many are in other major academic buildings also.

Uniformed police officers are being stationed in the locker rooms at all hours. Also, special notices are being posted in various buildings to remind students to lock personal belongings, said Kelshaw.

Students are being urged to take special care about where they leave personal belongings and to lock doors on dorms and lockers, said Kelshaw.

Israeli prof featured in Zionist talk

Dr. Jonathan Shunary, an Israeli scholar from the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, will be the featured speaker of the Israeli Awareness Club Dec. 9.

Dr. Shunary will present the Zionist position of the Israeli-Arab situation and the position of the Palestinians beginning at 7:30 p.m. in 562 ELWC. The public is invited.

Omar Kader, a Palestinian Arab and a BYU political science instructor, spoke at the Israeli Awareness Club lecture last Thursday, presenting his pro-Palestinian position. His speech was titled, "Confessions of a Mixed-Up Arab."

Being an active LDS and a Palestinian Arab, Kader said he sees himself in a unique situation. He insists his pro-Palestinian political position does not conflict in any way with his religious beliefs because the church has not yet issued an official statement concerning Zionism.

Zader described Zionism as a secular movement based on a nationality rather than a religious or church affiliation. Zionism is not synonymous with Judaism as a faith or religion. Accordingly, there are a number of anti-Zionist Jews he said. He feels Theodore Herzl's move to Zionism was purely political in order to find a Jewish state. Herzl was the first to declare Zionism in the 1800's.

Kader's position is that the Zionists came to Palestine expelling the Arabs from their land (of which they owned 90 per cent) and their homes.

Eyring Institute to propose study

A high official of the biggest backer of the Kaiparowits power plant project is on the board of directors of a Provo research organization that is proposing to conduct an environmental impact study of the plant.

But both the officials and officers of the research organization say there would be no conflict of interest.

William R. Gould, Executive Vice President of Southern California Edison, the largest backer of the power plant project, is also on the board of directors of Eyring Research Institute. The Provo-based institute plans to submit a proposal for the contract to conduct an environmental impact study required by federal agencies before the power plant project can begin.

Dr. Ronald Hansen, Eyring President said the study Eyring proposes to do is not the study on which the federal government will base its decision about whether to approve the Kaiparowits project.

The Eyring Institute's work would determine the effects of the power plant on water, air, plant life and animals. The study would establish a "baseline" from which the effects on the environment could be measured and would monitor those effects.

Dr. Hansen said Gould would not influence the study. He termed the possibility "far-fetched."

An Dr. Thomas E. Sawyer, Vice President of Research at Eyring, said, "The structure of the whole thing precludes bias; there are too many levels."

Dr. Sawyer said scientists from various universities in Utah would be working on the study, making it impossible to influence their findings. In addition, Gould is only one of nine directors, each having a vote. Dr. Sawyer said Gould's dual position does not represent an uncommon practice.

Gould told the Universe, "I in no way influence their professional judgment or the findings of their staff. I guide the management in the operation of the institute, period."

Dr. Hansen said the study is in the proposal stage and there is no contractual agreement as yet between the project's three sponsors: Southern California Edison, Arizona Public Service and San Diego Gas and Electric.

The Kaiparowits plant, if approved, will be located in South Central Utah's Kane County.

The study in question will not begin until the site for the Kaiparowits plant is selected and the project approved.

Snell said the three companies, through subsidiaries, own coal mines that would provide fuel for the coal-fired plant.

Y educator appointed to group

Dr. Rulon L. Bradley, BYU professor of Communications, has been appointed a member of the International Committee of the Public Relations Society of America.

The appointment was announced in New York by Benjamin S. Greenberg, Chairman of the International Committee.

Dr. Bradley recently made a presentation on the cooperative project of the BYU Public Relations Student Society of America International Students at a meeting of the International Committee at the United Nations Building in New York.

Dr. Bradley said the International Committee was very interested in the large number of international students at BYU and the efforts here to promote better relations between people of different nations.

Club receives national honor

By JOHN GIBBS
Universe Staff Writer

The BYU chapter of the Public Relations Student Society of America (PRSSA) was awarded a national citation at the annual conference of the public relations Society of America in New York City, Nov. 16-19.

Dr. Rulon L. Bradley, professor of communications at BYU, and John R. Gibbs, president of the BYU student chapter, were present to receive the "Outstanding Chapter of the Year" award in the area of university service.

According to Dr. Bradley, the award was made in recognition of a project done in cooperation with the International Student Office. The project was produced by public relations students and members of the student chapter of PRSSA.

Dr. Bradley said the competition was won by three areas university service, community service, and chapter development. He also said the judges were impressed with the quality of the winning entries.

in university service chapter development felt no entry in the community development worthy of an award. Gibbs said the two were chosen from two student chapters a country. "The actual chapter have made BYU's public relations on most respected country," he said.

Commenting on Dr. Frederick H. education director said, "This is pre-type of project we to see all the produce. We are pleased with the did."

The award and plaque were presented by Richard K. Moore, Corporate Communications for Dart Industries, Los Angeles. Moore, the panel of judges.

The other award chapter was from Ohio. Both received a plaque remain with the school one year.

The dating record set by Bryant Scott, who is still surrounded by girls, will be on the line during the Dating Marathon Friday and Saturday. These girls, who are not the ones Scott dated when he set his record, are (first row from left) Lauren Willis, Michell Baker and Lori Marler and (second row from left) Margaret McKendrick, Karen Reid, Inger Karlstrom, Tiana Fatutiale and Janet Allred.

Gets choice

The first-place winner will have the option of taking $80 worth of sporting equipment or a Provo superdate. Hydeman said a Provo superdate is a dinner at the local restaurant of choice followed by seats of choice at an ASBYU concert.

Second prize will be the leftover option from first prize, Hydeman said. The third place winner will have his choice of four LPs at the bookstore.

The winners will be announced at the BYU Basketball classic on Dec. 12.

With 13 dates in 24 hours at a total cost of $5, Bryant Scott set his semi-official Dating Marathon record in the winter semester of 1974.

Though Scott's record may not be the only such accomplishment in Provo, his "night on the town" is the semi-official record which Our Gang of the ASBYU Social Office is seeking to break this weekend in the Centennial Dating Marathon. Scott's dating marathon was initiated by casual talk among his roommates. "We were wondering how many girls we could take out in 24 hours," Scott reported. Soon he and two roommates had challenged each other to the marathon.

Reason given

"Our primary motivation was to get to know girls we did not know too well before," said Scott, a junior in mechanical engineering from Scottsdale, Ariz. The dating champ reported that he won the competition by default because his roommates failed to line up the necessary dates. The prize, a steak dinner, is yet to be awarded. Scott said he still expects to receive his prize. Scott's favorite date among the 13 was the 3 a.m. picnic in Kiwanis Park. Though the park closes at 10 p.m., Scott said his date cooked him pancakes there in the park. He commented that she also fulfilled a creative dating requirement for a CDFR class on that date.

Other dates included looking at the art displays in the Harris Fine Arts Center, attending a musical drama at the Provo tabernacle, a snack at the Cougar eat, a walk from Heritage Hall to the football stadium and a tour of the fish displays in the Widtsoe Building.

The girl who accompanied Scott to the art displays was a substitute for the girl he had originally asked.

Mask Club bill offers 2 plays

The Mask Club will present two plays today in the Neike Experimental Theatre, HFAC.

"Where Have All The Lightning Bugs Gone?" by Lois E. Catron, will be presented at 12:10 and 4:10 p.m. J. Howard Stoddard will direct the play.

"The Marvelous Adventures of Tyl," by Jonathan Levy, will also be performed at the same times. Debora Lee Thoten will direct "Tyl."

'Celebration' to make debut

A Bicentennial composition by a BYU music professor will have its first performance Wednesday night at a Utah Valley Symphony concert.

"Yankee Celebration," by Dr. Merrill Bradshaw, composer-in-residence at BYU, will be performed for the first time Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Provo Tabernacle. Dr. Glenn K. Williams, conductor of the Utah Valley Symphony, said that Dr. Bradshaw gave special permission for the symphony to perform the work before the Pennsylvania All-State Honor Orchestra performs it next February.

According to Dr. Williams, "The Bradshaw number is fun-filled, stirring, patriotic, and features a use of the musicians never before done in Provo." He was referring to a "clapping chorus," where the use of instruments is suspended for a "hoedown" of the hands.

Dr. Williams said that Dr. Bradshaw has received considerable acclaim for his instrumental and choral compositions. Dr. Bradshaw's oratorio, "The Restoration," was performed on campus last year and will be presented again in March.

The Symphony will also perform "The Young Person's Guide to the Orchestra," by the British composer, Benjamin Britten. It will be narrated by Dr. Williams.

The second half of the concert will have a Christmas theme, and will include Englebert Humperdinck's "Evening Prayer and Dream Pantomime," from "Hansel and Gretel," "Polonaise," from "Christmas Night" by Rimsky Korsakov, "A Christmas Festival," by Leroy Anderson, and carol singing with the audience.

BYU cagers split weekend contests

By TERRI BELL
Universe Sports Writer

Utilizing a strong man-to-man defense and a fast-break offense, the Cougar basketball team defeated the Australian Olympic Team Saturday night 59-70.

The two teams played on even terms throughout the first half, with the Cats finally pulling to a 44-34 halftime lead. BYU shot 47 per cent from the field in the first period, but came back to shoot 63 per cent in the second half, compared to 52 per cent for the Aussies.

Coach Frank Arnold substituted freely during the game. He played all 13 men on the squad, getting strong performances from each.

The starting lineup for the Cougars was Vance Law, Terry Gugat, Troy Jones, Jay Cheesman and Mark Handy, but Arnold said he could "feel comfortable starting any combination of players on the team."

One frustration for the Cats was their inability to get another basket to go over 100 points. With 1:58 to go in the game, Chris Williams made the score 97-66. Thirty-eight seconds later he upped the score to 99 with two free throws.

However, the Cougars were unable to capitalize on two more free throw attempts and left the floor with the score at 99-70.

Andy Campbell, the Australian's 7-1 center, in whom the Cougars have shown some interest, was ineffective offensively due to the checking of Handy, Cheesman and Jones. He fouled out 34 seconds into the second period, after sinking only two of seven field goal attempts for a 28 per cent average.

Five Y players hit double figures against the Australians. Junior forward Mark Handy led the Cougars with 18 points. Guard Veryl Law had 16 points, Miso Ostarcovic finished with 13 and Reed Noble and Jay Cheesman both had 10 points.

The victory was marred when Vance Law had to be helped off the court in the second half because of a knee injury. According to Arnold, the immediate diagnosis was a pulled ligament in the right knee.

Arnold said he felt good about the performance of the team Saturday night. "I like the way they play with complete abandon," he said. "I was pleased with the man-to-man. We made good adjustments on defense."

However, he added, "we need to clean up some of the game. We were more careless with the ball than we can afford to be," and added that there were a lot of careless passes. The Cougars had 21 turnovers compared to the Australians with 27.

The coach also pointed out that the Cougars need work on rebounding. "We are not nearly as good a rebounding team yet as I hope we will be," he said, even though the taller Cats out-rebounded the Aussies 50-38.

Veryl Law lays up two of his 16 points against the Australian National team Saturday night.

Universe Sports Editor

On Friday night, 10,068 fans braved chilling winds and a major snowfall to watch ex-Cougar Kresimir Cosic and the Yugoslavian National team defeat a young but fast-improving Cougar squad 78-75 at the Marriott Center.

Cosic never showed the spark that BYU faithfuls had become accustomed to when he led the Cats to a couple of WAC crowns in the early 70s. He scored 16 points, but only hit on 31 per cent from the floor (five of 16).

Cosic holds many Marriott Center records and he may have set another one against his old teammates as he was guilty of 10 turnovers, compared to the Cougars' total of just 12.

Coach Frank Arnold went to his bench repeatedly as 12 different players saw action. The Cats employed a fast-break offense but had trouble getting it started as the much-taller Yugoslavians out-rebounded the Cats 55 to 42.

The game was a see-saw battle as the lead changed hands 13 times throughout the contest. The Cougars held a 65-59 lead with just under seven minutes remaining when Cosic and Drazen Dalipagic led the Yugoslavians with 13 unanswered points before forward Mark Handy hit with a short hook shot with just two minutes remaining, leaving the Cats on the short end of a 72-67 score.

With a minute 40 left, BYU called a time out. The Cats returned to the court and continued to press with Reed Noble, Jay Cheesman and Veryl Law hitting timely buckets. The Cougars pulled to within one point, 76-75, with 13 seconds remaining. BYU immediately called its final time out.

In the remaining time, the Cats could not get the ball away from their opponents and freshman Steve Craig fouled Srecko Jaric in an attempt to steal the ball. Jaric hit both ends of the bonus situation, and Yugoslavia had the game 78-75.

The Cougars were led by Handy with 14 points, Cheesman with 13 and Veryl Law, hitting five of six and one foul shot, for 11 points.

The Cats shot 43 per cent from the floor and an anemic 27 per cent from the foul line.

Yugoslavia was led by Dalipagic, whose feather-like shots accounted for 31 points as he hit on 14 of 20 field goal attempts for a 70 per cent shooting mark. Cosic led all rebounders as he hauled down 13 caroms. Cheesman led the Cats with nine rebounds.

Yugoslavia shot 47 per cent from the floor but hit on 18 of 27 attempts from the charity stripe compared to just 13 of 12 for the Cougars.

Merger fails, Stars may fold

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Owner Bill Daniels announced Monday he had failed in his efforts to save the Utah Stars, which will become the third American Basketball Association team to fold this season unless rescued by the league.

ABA trustees met today in Chicago, but Daniels said the chances are "very, very slim" that they will keep the team in operation. He noted the league merely auctioned off players when Baltimore and San Diego folded earlier this season.

Collapse of the Stars, who won an ABA title and put winning teams on the floor in all but one of their five previous seasons in Utah, would reduce ABA membership ranks to seven. In addition, the future of at least one other financially troubled ABA team, the Virginia Squires, has been in doubt since then.

Daniels had attempted to "fold" the team by merging it with the Spirits of St. Louis, which have not been drawing well in their city. But he said talks with St. Louis officials collapsed Sunday night, partly due to financial considerations such as a long-term arena lease in St. Louis and partly because he could not obtain conference. Daniels also said that in his efforts to save the player payroll due Monday, the contracts revert to the team which has 10 days to pay them, he said. In the meantime, Daniels said he had agreed around 48 hours to happen.

"I have done everything I can to keep the Stars operating, viable, the great state of Utah," he said.

He said, "I have the best, but I guess I've got to be a commissioner. DeBusschere if he would field a team Wednesday night's game with San Antonio, the commissioner to 'I don't know.'"

As in the past, Daniels attributed some problems to the state basketball in general, said he has spent $3 million on the Stars. "Pro basketball too deep, deep trouble, leagues. If you returned to the sport order, the public is to stand the nonsense. Daniels.

Tennis for 22,000 fans? Meets, a possibility...

Tennis in the Marriott Center?

It's entirely possible, according to unique plans announced this week by BYU tennis coaches Wayne Pearce and Ann Valentine. They are shooting for a March date for a mixed team match against either Arizona State or Utah.

The BYU coaches are elated over last week's thrilling 22-21 victory over Arizona State in front of 3,500 fans in the ASU Activities Center.

BYU and ASU set collegiate history with the first mixed team tennis event ever staged. The evening consisted of one set of women's doubles followed by one set of men's singles, men's doubles, men's singles and mixed doubles.

Each game was determined by which side got four points first. There were no deuce scores. If a set finished 6-3, those were the points awarded each team. Substitutions could be made at any time, as in basketball, and the fans were able to yell and whistle all they wanted.

Who said, "Broken rules are all the same?"

It proved to be an exciting setting on a carpeted surface provided by the professional Phoenix Racquets of the World Team Tennis League.

BYU fell behind early as ASU's Sue Boyle and Nancy Janco downed Marilyn Koski and Karen Kennington, 6-3. An ASU victory seemed assured when highly ranked ASU netter Chris Penn ramped to a 3-0 lead over Karen Kennington, who was then replaced by Susie Brown. The match finished 6-1 in favor of ASU to give the Sun Devils a lopsided 12-4 team lead.

Later Coach Valentine would explain: "I feel it was just a matter of the girls being a little bit tense. They aren't used to playing under that kind of pressure in front of so many people."

The turnaround started with Bruce Kleege and Mike Nissley continued their impressive doubles play of this fall by beating ASU's Jeremy Cohen and Glen Holroyd, 6-4. That made the team score 16-10, with the Sun Devils still in a comfortable position.

After all, ASU was going in the singles match with All-American Mark Joffey, the defending Western Athletic Conference singles champion. Kleege had advanced to the finals at the Utah and BYU Invationals earlier this fall only to collapse in the championship matches.

But Kleege came up with a remarkable performance against Joffey with four straight aces. He then broke service, came back with a couple more aces and the 3-0 BYU lead suddenly put the Cougars right back in the race for the team title.

With an incredible 6-1 victory Kleege offset Penn's impressive showing in the women's singles and the ASU team lead was cut to 17-16. So the team title boiled down to the mixed doubles with Mike Nissley and Susie Brown going against Glen Holroyd and Sue Boyle. It was 2-2 in the decisive set when BYU broke service to tie the team score and get an opening to win the set, 6-4, and the match, 22-21.

"It was the most successful debut of mixed tennis I could imagine," Coach Valentine said. "I believe the format will really catch hold. And our girls will definitely do better in the return match."

Cosie Pearce doesn't think his players could possibly play better but he's excited about the prospects of a rematch—especially before a large crowd in the Marriott Center.

Y gridders make WAC team

Five BYU football players have been named to the 1975 Coaches All-WAC football team.

Tailback Jeff Blanc and offensive lineman Brad Oates were unanimous selections. Defensive backs Dana Wilgar and Gary Shaw, and linebacker Sid Smith, were also named to the first team.

But center Orrin Olsen, a unanimous choice last year, was edged out in this year's voting by New Mexico's Steve Wilson and received honorable mention. Cougar defensive lineman Stan Varner, who had been considered as a candidate for the team, also received honorable mention in the selection, in which the eight WAC coaches select an "ideal" team.

Arizona State, which defeated Arizona 24-21 Saturday to take the WAC crown, placed seven players on the squad. The second-place Wildcats had six players.

Five New Mexico gridders were named to the team, Wyoming and Colorado State had three each, Texas-El Paso had one and Utah had none.

In addition to Olsen and Varner, the following Cougars also received honorable mention:

Quarterback Gifford Nielsen, receiver John VanDerWoude, offensive lineman Dave Hubbard and linebacker Phil Jensen.

Here are the listings as published by the WAC offices, of the first-team selections:

Graham Hill dies; probe underway

LONDON (AP) — Investigators probing the air crash which killed former world motor racing champion Graham Hill and five of his team were trying to find answers Monday to two questions as they examined the burnt-out wreckage of the light airplane he had been piloting.

The first question was why Hill, an experienced pilot, chose in heavy fog to continue to head for an airport with only minimal navigational aids instead of diverting to another nearby airport with full radar landing facilities.

The other question was whether ice forming on the wings of his red and white, twin-engined, six-seat Piper Aztec plane weighed it down and was responsible for sending it crashing into trees near a golf course 10 miles north of London Saturday night.

The plane crashed on the course three miles from Elstree Airport after leaving Marseilles, France, and burst into flames. Hill and his team had been testing a new car on a French Riviera racing circuit.

The bodies of Hill, 46 and his five passengers, who included his protégé driver Brice, a 23-year-old Briton, were badly burnt.

ASU wins for All-American duo

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Eight-ranked Arizona State University kept 51,388 screaming fans waiting until the last minute before turning back Arizona 24-21 for the Western Athletic Conference Football title and a Fiesta Bowl berth against No. 6 Nebraska.

The lead changed hands three times Saturday night before quarterback Dennis Sproul marched the 11-0 Sun Devils 80 yards in the fourth quarter, carrying from the one for the winning tally.

But the 11th-ranked Wildcats, finishing 9-2 overall and 5-2 in the WAC, kept threatening.

With 9:30 remaining, UA moved to the ASU 33 where quarterback Bruce Hill was sacked twice and forced to punt. Arizona then forced an ASU punt with 3:28 left, but bogged on the Sun Devil 33 again when John Harris intercepted Hill for only the third time this season.

ASU punted from its own 44 with 1:49 left, but Hill missed Scott Piper with a bomb, and got rid of the ball as he was caught on the next two plays.

With one play left on fourth down, Hill threw to "Bell only to have the ball bounce off his fingers.

NEW YORK (AP) — Oklahoma's devastating Selmon brothers, Leroy and Dewey, completed a family sweep when they were named to The Associated Press 1975 college football All-American team Monday along with four repeaters, led by Ohio State's Archie Griffin.

Leroy Selmon is a 256-pound defensive tackle while Dewey is a 257-pound nose guard. Their older brother, Lucio, was named to the 1973 All-American team.

The Selmon brothers are joined on the 1975 squad by teammate Jimbo Elrod, a defensive end, giving Oklahoma three positions on the defensive front five.

Griffin repeats. Besides tailback Griffin, major college football's first 5,000-yard ground-gainer and the 1974 Heisman Trophy winner, other repeaters from the 1974 All-American team are center Rick Bonness of Nebraska, defensive end Leroy Cook of Alabama and defensive back Pat Thomas of Texas A&M.

Joining Griffin in the All-American backfield are a trio of West Coast players. They are quarterback John Scarra, who led UCLA to its first Rose Bowl in 10 years; running back Ricky Bell of Southern California, who topped the nation with 1,875 yards and fell just six short of the major college single-season record; and Chuck Muncie, who broke every school rushing, all-purpose running and scoring mark in leading California to a share of the Pacific-8 Conference crown.

The tight end is Mike Barber of Louisiana Tech, who made the Little All-American team a year ago when his school was a member of the NCAA's College Division.

The rest of the offensive line consists of wide receiver Larry Seivers of Tennessee, tackles Mark Konecny of Colorado and Bob Simmons of Texas and guards Randy Johnson of Georgia and Ted Smith of Ohio State.

Joining the Selmons, Elrod and Cook on the defensive front five is the biggest member of the All-American team, 6-foot-5, 270-pound tackle Steve Niehaus of Notre Dame.

The linebackers are Greg Buttle of Penn State, Sammy Green of Florida and Ed Simonini of Texas A&M's No. 1-ranked defensive unit. The defensive backs besides Thomas are Mike Haynes of Arizona State and Chad Moeller of Navy.
